Canada received 872 Lebanese students in 2015. A three-year program is usually up to 99 credits, and a four-year program is up to 144 credits. The institution does not charge students beyond 15 credits. The committee acts as “the only [official] reference to ... the recognition of certificates and equivalence for education levels in various domains (general education, higher education and technical and professional education).” The Committee also provides general curriculum guidelines for universities, which use the guidelines to develop their curricula, before sending them back to the approval committee. Both at the intermediate level and at the most advanced secondary level, the TVET is divided into technical education and professional education. Some have adopted other international systems, namely the Canadian or German university model. As of late 2016, 1,001,366 Syrian refugees were registered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in Lebanon, the second largest number of Syrian refugees after Turkey. For institutions that use the ECTS (European Credit Transfer System), a three-year bachelor's degree is usually 180 ECTS credits. That said, some Lebanese institutions, including the American University of Beirut, Université Saint-Joseph de Beyrouth (Saint Joseph of Beyrouth University), and the Lebanese University, admitted Syrians. Includes an overview of the educational system and a guide to educational institutions and qualifications. Many students can also see education as a spring board for employment abroad; others may be looking for a path to immigration – both likely drivers in the face of high unemployment at home.
